A spirited University lies nestled among the rolling hills and tranquil lakes of Carrollton. Across campus and around town, you’ll hear the hum of intellectual exploration, the laughter of camaraderie, and – of course – the howl of the Wolves.

At the University of West Georgia, we see things differently. We respect our roots but we’re not bound by tradition. We blaze our own trails rather than follow the crowd. And we’re making history, not simply studying it. This is the land of opportunity and discovery. If you ask us, the stars shine just a little brighter here – in the sky and among us.
