Course Description:

This course is a survey of world civilizations from c. 3,500 BCE to c. 1,600 CE. The goal of this course is not to achieve a comprehensive understanding of each culture examined, but rather a broad understanding of these civilizations and how they have helped to shape the modern world. Several themes such as law, political organization, religion and cultural heritages will be used so that students will be able to compare and contrast the civilizations surveyed. An additional theme will be contact (trade, warfare, cultural exchange etc.) between civilizations and the resulting consequences. This course also teaches students how to think like historians. Students will learn how to use historical evidence to construct an effective argument for exams.

Learning Outcomes:

Students who complete this course will:

- Have the ability to demonstrate both verbally and in writing a basic knowledge of world history.
- Have a better understanding of philosophical, religious, political, and cultural heritages that have helped to shape the modern world.
- Learn the fundamental methods of historical inquiry.
- Have improved writing and critical thinking skills.

Course Requirements:

1. Attending lectures is essential for success in this course. While there is no attendance policy, all exam questions will be taken from material covered in lecture.
2. There will be three essay examinations during the semester including the final examination. All exams will have short identifications and essays. The final will include an essay question which is cumulative.
3. In addition to attending all lectures, you must also complete all of the assigned reading. While this course is primarily lecture based, we will discuss primary source documents during lecture on certain days. Because reading is important for success in this class, I have scheduled several reading quizzes. Your participation grade will be based upon contributions during discussions and your performance on quizzes. All readings are on Electronic Reserve at the Ingram Library.

Grading:

Quizzes and Class Participation: 10%

First Exam: 25%

Second Exam: 30%

Final: 35%

Cheating:

Cheating of any kind will result in an "F" for the course and further disciplinary action may be taken.

Miscellaneous:

There will be no make-up exams.

There will be no extra-credit.

Grade information will not be given out via email.

All email correspondence must be via your UWG email account.

The lecture schedule is tentative will be revised throughout the semester.

It is the student's responsibility to come to class and note changes to the reading, lecture and quiz schedule.
