STRENGTHS:
Certain strengths remain:
The program provides a quality curriculum. The program provides quality graduates for employment in the accounting and finance professions and for enrollment in masters and doctoral programs. Faculty members maintain an active research and publication agenda. Faculty members remain active in academic and professional presentations. Faculty members are actively involved in academic and professional workshops. Faculty members are actively involved in professional and academic organizations. Faculty members are actively involved in departmental, RCOB, and institutional service. Students express in exit interviews that the department has an excellent teaching faculty.
Additional strengths:
WEAKNESSES:
Some of the weaknesses remain:
The small number of faculty members in the department does not allow for flexibility in scheduling of courses for accounting and finance majors. This is a normal occurrence with a small faculty. The small number of faculty members in the department does not allow for adequate backup of professors in the event of absences due to illness.
Others have been identified:
OPPORTUNITIES:
Certain opportunities remain:
The robust job market for accounting and finance majors enhances the attractiveness of the majors to prospective students.
Other opportunities have been identified:

THREATS:Certain threats remain:

The national trend of declining enrollments in masters programs is a threat to the enrollment numbers in the MPAcc program.

Competition from online universities threatens to erode the student bases at both the graduate and undergraduate levels.

Summary of Results for the Assessment of Learning Goal 7

The AICPA Level II examination has been used by the department for assessment of the understanding of accounting topics for many years. However, annual updating of the examination has been discontinued and some of the questions on the exam are no longer relevant. Thus, the Assessment Committee decided that the examination has outlived its usefulness.

Action to be taken

In the fall semester of 2006, embedded assessment modules will be used in Financial Reporting I (ACCT 3212), Managerial Accounting (ACCT 3232), and Accounting Information Systems (ACCT 4241). In the spring semester of 2007, embedded assessment modules will be used in Financial Reporting II (ACCT 3212), Income Tax Accounting for Individuals (ACCT 3251), and Auditing (ACCT 4261).
