

Integrative Health Certificate Studies

What is Integrative Health Certificate Studies?

Integrative health is one of the fastest growing areas in the health care industry. The aim of Integrative Health Certificate Studies (IHCS) is to provide students a solid foundation in the area of integrative health, through a series of four online courses: Introduction to Integrative Health Care, Trends in Integrative Health, Psychology of Mind/Body, and Mindfulness. The courses may be taken individually or linked together for completion of the IHCS. The IHCS is a non-credit program offered by UWG Continuing Education and is open to the community. The Summer/Fall 2018 Cohort will start with the first of the four online courses, Introduction to Integrative Health Care, on July 16, 2018.

Who should take Integrative Health Certificate Studies?

The IHCS is designed for anyone in the health-care industry (especially those who are at the bedside), hospital administrators, practitioners, mental health-care personnel, social workers, professionals in the field of education and interested individuals.

What are the benefits of this program?

The IHCS will prepare students to learn and develop how to implement fundamental principles of integrative health care to be better providers and practitioners.

Want more information?

Visit the IHCS webpage at westga.edu/conted/integrativehealth-cert or contact UWG Continuing Education at conted@westga.edu or 678-839-6611.