ORSP Welcomes New Staff, Offers New Service:

Dr. Julie Hawk (left) and Ashley Miller (right) have both recently joined the UWG ORSP

Office.

Julie Hawk provides a new service on behalf of the office: grant writing consultation for faculty and staff. She is currently an English instructor here and worked at Georgia Tech prior to her arrival at UWG. At Tech, she co-authored several major grants and served on the grant writing committee. She has experience working with grant writers across disciplines and can assist faculty with refining their ideas and getting them on paper. She won't be doing budget development, but can assist with the creation of a strong, clear narrative. Julie will also be working to develop grant writing workshops for various populations on campus, and holds office hours every Tuesday in Mandeville, but can also be reached by appointment.

Ashley Miller, our new Pre-Award Coordinator, worked as a Research Associate at the University of Memphis and as a Research Specialist at the University of Tennessee Health Center. In addition to assisting PIs with grant applications, Ashley will also offer workshops on a variety of topics. Ashley has already been busy assisting faculty with grant prep-work, so don't hesitate to reach out to her if you have any questions about the application process.

Contact information for both Julie and Ashley is below. Be sure to take advantage of these resources when you apply for your next grant!

OEA Presents Wolves Abroad Peer Advisors

The Office of Education Abroad is pleased to introduce our Wolves Abroad Peer Advisors for Fall 2016. All of our Wolves Abroad Peer Advisors studied abroad last year – from Chile to France to China – and they're eager to share the experience with other UWG students. Contact the OEA (goabroad@westga.edu) if you'd like to have one of them do a presentation for your class. They can share information about types of programs and funding options and provide their own personal insight on the value of the experience. Peer advisors are also available for consultations in our office in Gunn Hall. This year's Wolves Abroad Peer Advisors are Earvin Anumgba (Business Management, '16), Abigail Butler (Spanish, '16), Abigail Samuda (Economics, '17), Leslie Shields (Mathematics, '17) and KaRa Thompson (Business Management, '17).
