Connecting with Students
Tips for student volunteers that are good fits

1) Know your goals and areas that could use a volunteer’s assistance

2) Reach out to partners who might have volunteers that would be good fits - Aim for connection

3) Meet students where they are at by reaching out to the places they are spending their time
   - What areas are they interested in?
   - Where and how are they currently involved?
   - What could be relevant tasks for their major?

4) Listen to what your volunteer is seeking to get out of assisting your organization - mutually beneficial relationship

5) Be flexible and willing to think outside-the-box when it comes to what volunteers can do

6) Open two-way communication throughout entire process

7) Communicate from beginning what student will be doing during serving as a volunteer
