Course Description: Maintaining a global perspective has become an essential tool for an informed and responsible world citizenship. This kind of perspective on the past is also necessary for understanding global societies and will help students relate the global past to the contemporary world within a meaningful historical context. This course provides a fast-paced introduction to world civilizations from just before the Age of Discovery through the end of the 20th century focusing on two large themes: connections between different civilizations in world history after 1400 CE, and how historians can use primary sources as a window into everyday life and experiences of people in the past. While the amount of material that we will be covering is immense and might seem daunting, it is not your duty as a budding historian to memorize every single detail mentioned in readings and discussions. Rather, through the study of the most influential developments in world civilization, you will acquire a deeper understanding of the world around you, and how it became the way it is now. After all, many events covered in this course, such as the Discovery of the Americas, the European Enlightenment or the end of the International Slave Trade still affect your life today. While learning about these events, you will also develop analytical skills that will help you succeed in the remainder of your college career and beyond.

Required Reading: There are NO required text books for this course. However, you WILL be reading, but all class materials are free of charge and will be uploaded to Coursedden. I will be using a combination of readings, primary source documents, videos, and documentaries to provide you with a broad historical overview of each time period we will cover.
Course Objectives and Learning Outcomes

Upon successful completion of this course, you will have acquired the ability to do the following:

1. To understand the political, social, economic, or cultural dimensions of world history after 1500 CE
2. To evaluate critically primary sources of various types (both textual and visual), and to make use of these sources in posing and answering important historical questions
3. To discuss historical questions and problems in standard English prose

Assignments and Grading Policies

<td>Discussion Assignments</td>
<td>Each student will participate in seven CourseDen discussions on the assigned course materials. The first discussion assignment is introducing yourself to each other. The remaining six discussions are meant to be a forum for considering the course material, as well as asking questions about anything in the material that is unclear. Please keep in mind that to get full credit on a discussion, you must not only make your own post in response to a discussion prompt, but also comment on posts of at least two classmates. These responses must be substantive – meaning, you should not just compliment your classmates, but have something to add to the discussion in your responses. The point of the discussions is, after all, to allow all of the students in the class to engage with each other’s ideas about the course material. Please consult the rubric below for grading criteria.</td>

<td>Primary Source Reaction Papers/Documentary Reaction Papers/Reading Quizzes</td>
<td>Each student will complete a number of reaction papers to assigned primary source material or full-length documentaries. Writing helps YOU to contextualize what you’ve read within the chronological period of history we are studying. These papers are designed to help you think critically about a particular primary source or documentary, as well as to assess how well you read/understood each of the sources. In addition, you will be taking quizzes from time to time on material you have seen or read. Additional instructions will be given in the</td>

<td>Family Interview Project (in lieu of mid-term exam)</td>
<td>As budding historians, this project is designed to help you create your own primary source material. You will interview a family member about something that happened in the past but that you do not remember. I’d like for you to be as creative as possible with this project. More information will be given in the actual assignment.</td>

Communication Rules

Per university policy, all email communications between faculty and students should be limited to the UWG email accounts. I will not respond to emails sent from other accounts. Also in accordance with university policies, I cannot discuss your grade with you over email. I am, however, always happy to discuss your grade with you in person. Please keep in mind, also, that I will be using the CourseDen gradebook for this class, so you will always be able to find all of your grades to date entered there.

Classroom (N)Etiquette:

Please be courteous and professional towards me and all of you classmates in your emails and discussion postings. Historians regularly disagree with each other on interpretations or approaches to evidence. Thus I expect that you will sometimes disagree with me and/or with each other during some of the discussions. I hope, nevertheless, that we will also respect each other, listen to dissenting points of view, and will be able to learn and benefit from the differing historical perspectives that we will each bring to the course material.
Late Submissions Policy: Because you are juggling this course and probably several others, in addition to family, work, and life, it is very difficult to catch up on missed assignments. I would encourage you to complete assignments as soon as they are opened in Courseden, keeping in mind the due dates for submission. In the event of a documented medical or family emergency, I will allow late submissions. Otherwise, late submissions will not be accepted.

Academic Dishonesty:

Academic dishonesty on any assignment in this course will result in an F for the course, and the referral of the student to the appropriate university committee. Academic dishonesty can take many shapes. Please avoid inadvertent plagiarism by ALWAYS citing any sources that you use when writing papers or essays. I will using Turnitin for ALL written assignments. If I find that you have plagiarized in any shape or form, you will receive an F for the course. Do not test me on this, if you value passing this class. An explanation of plagiarism can be found here: https://www.plagiarism.org/article/what-is-plagiarism
