Course Description and Objectives
The subject of this graduate seminar is the history of the indigenous peoples of the Americas, commonly known as Native Americans or American Indians. Speaking perhaps 2,000 different languages at European contact, they never defined themselves as a single people, but their experience with European colonization created a certain commonality to their historical experience. In this class, we will read about and discuss various issues in American indigenous history from the 1500s to the present. The principal theme we will be studying is how American Indians have survived, adapted to, and participated in European-dominated societies in both South and North America.

Students who apply themselves in this class will be able to better understand historiography and the analysis of sources. They will be able to hone their skills in critical thinking, writing, research, and presentation. They will learn to see beyond old myths of Native Americans as savages or innocent children of nature, and beyond the triumphal narrative of European conquest, to comprehend something of the struggles and achievements of subaltern, colonized people. In acquiring an understanding of other cultures’ perspectives on history, students will be better equipped to participate responsibly in an increasingly diverse and globalized world.

Course Requirements:
Reading, attendance, and participation are absolutely essential. I reserve the right to make changes to this syllabus. It is your responsibility to attend class so that you may be aware of any changes. Participation will count for 20% of your final grade, with the rest coming from written assignments and presentations. You will write 5 page (minimum) papers or reviews on 6 of the following 7 topics: Titu Cusi Yupanqui and Inca articles, the Pueblo Revolt, and the Yannakakis, Jacoby, García, Neihardt, and Deloria books (it is your choice which topics to write on, but you must read and come prepared to discuss all the topics). You will also have to choose one indigenous group and research its history on your own, and produce a 15-20 page paper and presentation at the end of the semester. This paper can be a narrative history or a historiographic essay.
Grading
Class participation 20%
6 of the 7 possible papers/reviews 60% (10% each)
Paper and presentation on one indigenous group 20%

Academic Honesty
You are expected to be familiar with and abide by the university’s policies on academic honesty. As a West Georgia student, you have pledged not to lie, cheat, steal, or commit plagiarism. It is equally wrong to give aid as it is to receive it. When copying word for word from another source, you must use quotation marks and cite your source. When paraphrasing material or borrowing another author’s ideas, you must also cite your source. Assignments are to be done independently. Two or more students cannot hand in variations of the same paper, even if they study together. You are not allowed to submit your own work from a previous course without the prior instructor’s and my permission.
