KEYBOARD LITERATURE I: BAROQUE AND CLASSICAL
University of West Georgia Fall 2018
MUSC 4171/5171 Dr. Carol Gingerich
Humanities 335/eginger@westga.edu/678-839-6273

OBJECTIVES
1. To broaden student’s knowledge and appreciation of the standard Baroque and Classical keyboard literature through score reading and listening assignments.

2. To consider the role of the performer as cocreator by becoming familiar with the primary performing artists, both historical and contemporary, of this literature.

3. To consider the historical physical development of keyboard instruments and their technique, and the subsequent effects on repertoire and performance.

4. To listen to authentic performances of Baroque and Classical keyboard music in order to acquire an aural memory of the performance practice style.

5. To perform Baroque and Classical keyboard literature in a stylistically authentic manner in order to develop pianistic skill.

6. To consider the role that various types of editions play in creating an effective interpretation.

7. To become familiar with reference tools pertaining to the Baroque and Classical style for further study and lifelong learning.

8. To explore women and other underrepresented pianists’ contributions as composers, performers and teachers.

9. To primarily focus on solo piano literature, but to also include some concerti, vocal accompaniments, and chamber music, and repertoire written for harpsichord, clavichord and organ.

10. To begin to acquire a personal library of piano literature.

Article and Internet Report
 -you will review two articles, one from a standard piano journal and one from an internet journal (or approved website) regarding a topic of interest to you
 -one Baroque topic, one Classical topic
 -you will give an aural report to your classmates for approximately 5 minutes

Theoretical Analysis
 -you will do a theoretical analysis of a piece of repertoire representing a standard musical form such as fugue or sonata
 -this will be a general outline of the form as would be useful from a performing perspective
 -hand in photocopy of marked score

Class Performances
 -you will be assigned portions of repertoire to perform in class in order to demonstrate various aspects of performance practice style
 -repertoire assignments will accommodate individual student’s level of performance
Class Presentation

Choose a topic of special interest to you that you wish to investigate in-depth for the entire semester. It can be conceived as either:
a) interactive teaching of the class. Or
b) a presentation for a learned society such as a piano teacher’s group or professional convention. Ideal as a Research Day presentation

Possible topics include: performer as cocreator, performance anxiety, concert career management, performer biography (interview them?), composer history, concerto, vocal and chamber music repertoire, development of keyboard instruments, technology today, music journalism (create piano blog [Stephen Hough, Jeremy Denk]) etc. A written proposal must be submitted.

You will give a 10-15 minute class presentation either as a synopsis of your research, or by teaching the class. You may wish to include a performance by yourself, use a recorded performance, use Power Point, or use the internet. Your goal is to create an interesting and in-depth, informative presentation.

Final Exam
-will include aural and score identification of repertoire, short answer, essays

Homework Assignments
-small assignments including readings, class reports, class demonstrations, and email discussion groups

Attendance and Class Participation - attendance is taken on a daily basis
-it is desired that students will act professionally by arriving to class in a timely manner. Late arrivals will be reflected in the attendance portion of the grade.
-class participation in discussions and exercises is encouraged and noted
