Course description & Objectives
A comparative examination of several of the major theoretical perspectives alive in psychology today (psychodynamic, natural science, human science, transpersonal, and social-critical). These perspectives will be taken up as both providing comprehensive models for living as well as establishing divergent foundations for research and practice.

Required Texts:
Readings as supplied by instructor on Course Den.

Course Requirements:

Engagement: Because the course is offered online, it is up to you to make the most of the materials: PowerPoint lectures, readings, videos, etc.

Examinations: There will be four (4) regular examinations, to cover each section of course content over the term, and one (1) comprehensive final exam, totaling five (5) equally weighted exams. Exams will cover the reading assignments, lectures, videos, and discussion. Exams will likely be written, comprising short answer, long answer/short essay, and/or long essay questions. These will be made available at the end of every section. Exams may be turned in late with a 10% penalty; however, after the final deadline for all work no work will be accepted.

Book Review – Each student will complete a written seven to nine (7-9) page, including reference page (double-spaced, one (1) inch margin, APA style, etc.) book review (requirements/grading & possible books TBA), which will be due on April 25. The paper may be turned in late with a penalty of 10%; however, after the final deadline for all work no work will be accepted.

Extra Credit: Up to 50 extra points available for regular, consistent, and engaged participation on the Discussion Board on Course Den on issues that are substantive for course content (i.e., not administrative or procedural). To participate, students may engage in ongoing discussion or start their own threads. At the end of every section, the discussion forum for that section may close.

Course Expectations

Course Expectations

Preparation & Discussion: This is an upper-level course. Please prepare by doing all the assigned work, taking time to reflect on what you have read or viewed. The discussion board will be open on Course Den for discussion of administrative details of assignments, due dates, etc. as well as the content of the course to further understanding. Participation in these forums is purely discretionary on your part but could give you valuable extra credit, and makes the course much more interesting.

Academic Honesty: Students are responsible for upholding the honor code as set forth in the University’s Student Handbook. By submitting work for this course, students certify that it is their own individual effort. Students found cheating on any assignment will receive an “F” for the course.

Disability: If you have a registered disability that will require accommodation from me, please contact me at the beginning of the semester.

Open Door & Grades: I have an “open door” policy and encourage students to communicate their understanding of course content, as well as discuss direction of their academic interests, education/career, or other concerns they may have. Please do not ask for your grade at any point during the term. You are responsible for keeping track of your grades and estimating your performance.

Students should carefully review information here:

http://www.westga.edu/assetsDept/vpaa/Common_Language_for_Course_Syllabi.pdf
It contains important material pertaining to your rights and responsibilities in this class. Because these statements are updated as federal, state, university, and accreditation standards change, you should review the information each semester.

Course Announcements, Assignments, & Readings

Announcements concerning the course – including changes in readings, policies, instructions for papers, exam times/content, etc. – will occur via Course Den.

Online Delivery & Pacing

Though this course is offered online, efforts will be made to mirror live delivery of material. Consequently, you will need to devote your efforts to addressing the materials for each section of content. Near the end of each section, material will become available for the next section. Exams will be made available for a period of time at the end of each section of instruction. Online instruction requires a much higher degree of discipline, self-reflection, and self-study because there will not be opportunity for live discussion and dialogue. Please submit online work in a Word or PDF format. Students are responsible for the successful uploading/submission of work to Course Den.

Online Technical Support

For technical support for the online interface, please contact:

You may access live chat support directly from your Course Den course webpage.
