Sex is not a natural act. – Leonore Tiefer

COURSE DESCRIPTION & STUDENT LEARNING OUTCOMES

This course examines sociological aspects of sexuality. In this course, we will study sexuality as socially constructed with meanings that vary historically and across cultures. We will contemplate how we categorize sex, deconstructing many taken-for-granted assumptions. By reviewing different types of sex research, we will assess ethical and methodological challenges of researching sexuality. We will explore the ways we learn about sex and consider meanings of sexual bodies. We will critique media representations of sexuality and learn about diverse sexual practices. We will debate the commercial selling of sex and understand sociological aspects of procreation and sexual health. We will investigate how sexuality intersects with race, gender, sexual identity, and age as sites of intense social control. The course also takes seriously the problem of sexual violence. Finally, we will conclude the semester by envisioning possibilities to overcome challenges introduced throughout the term. By the end of this course, students will be able to practice sociological research methods and use critical thinking skills to analyze how sexualities are socially constructed and controlled.

NOTE: Final grades are FINAL. I do not offer extra credit and do not change final course grades because doing so is unfair to other students. Please see me early in the semester if you need assistance.

Reading Responses – 10%
To encourage responsiveness to the diverse issues addressed in the readings, I require that you turn in 10 one-page reading responses this semester. You can only turn in one response per class, and it must refer to something in the readings assigned for that day. This response should be typed, double-spaced, and include a header with your name and date on a single line. Reflect on something in at least two of the required readings for that day by focusing on a specific concept or interesting point. Do not summarize the articles. Your reading responses will not be graded, but they must include sufficient, thoughtful comments that demonstrate your understanding of the reading in order to receive credit. If I determine that your response should not get credit, I will return it to you with feedback. Usually, uncredited responses are too vague, too short, or refer to readings assigned for a different day. Each credited reading response is worth 1% of your final course grade (maximum of 10%).

Engaged Participation – 15%
To facilitate your engagement with the course, I will implement numerous in-class activities throughout the term. Engaged participation will be based on activities such as writing reflections, small group work, and class surveys. Participation activities will not be announced in advance, so it is in your best interest to attend class regularly. If you are present and participate in the day’s activity fully, you will receive 2 points for satisfactory participation. Being absent will result in 0 points and being present but not participating fully (e.g., insufficient writing, being absent for part of the activity, texting, refusing to talk to group members, etc.) will result in 1 point. Your final participation grade will be your total accrued points divided into the possible total points. Engaged participation is worth a maximum of 15% of your final course grade.

Papers – 30%
This semester I will assign 2 papers (~4 pages each). The papers are designed to stimulate your thinking on core course topics, and require you to apply sociological concepts to real life. Issue dates and due dates are noted in the syllabus, and specific instructions will be handed out in class on the issue dates. I will grade papers using the conventional numerical system, averaging these scores toward a maximum of 30% of your final course grade. Please use the University Writing Center to help you communicate your ideas effectively.*
Exams – 45%
This semester will include 3 sectional exams wherein you will critically think about material from assigned readings and class content. They will include multiple choice questions, and short- and long-answer essays. I will distribute study guides prior to each exam. I will grade exams using the conventional numerical system.*

*NOTE: I will drop the lowest grade among the paper and exam scores. In addition, I will consider your overall attendance and participation in cases of borderline final course grades.

POLICIES
Please review the Common Language for Course Syllabi. It contains important material pertaining to your rights and responsibilities in this class, including information about accessibility services, academic success, writing support, and the honor code. Because these statements are updated as federal, state, and accreditation standards change, you should review the information each semester.

Accessibility Services
Students with a documented disability may work with UWG Accessibility Services to receive essential services specific to their disability. All entitlements to accommodations are based on documentation and USG Board of Regents standards. If a student needs course adaptations/accommodations because of a disability/chronic illness, or if they need to make special arrangements in case the building must be evacuated, the student should notify their instructor in writing and provide a copy of their Student Accommodations Report (SAR), which is available from Accessibility Services. Faculty cannot offer accommodations without timely receipt of the SAR and no retroactive accommodations will be given. For information, please contact Accessibility Services.

CourseDen
You are required to regularly check our CourseDen page. This site will include announcements, readings, assignments, Turnitin links, and grades.

Attendance
I believe there are various legitimate reasons for missing class. Therefore, I do not distinguish between excused and unexcused absences unless a student is officially representing the University in sanctioned events. If you miss class, it is your responsibility to get notes from a classmate and to communicate with me regarding absences. All students are responsible for turning in assignments when they are due.

Academic Honesty
UWG students are expected to adhere to the honor code and maintain academic honesty. Acts of academic dishonesty—including, but not limited to, cheating, plagiarism, excessive collaboration, and resubmitting work from another class—can result in an “F” in the course. Honor code violations are reported to the Office of Community Standards. Trust that I treat academic dishonesty as a serious offense.
Missted and Late Assignments

- Reading Responses – Due in class. For credit, students must attend the class in which they turn in a Response. You are allowed one opportunity to turn in a RR that you were unable to submit in class. This RR should be emailed before midnight on the date it is due.
- Participation Activities – Make-ups permitted only for University-sanctioned business.
- Papers – Turn in a hardcopy for me to grade in class on the due dates. If you don’t turn in a hardcopy by the due date, you may upload a paper to Turnitin on CourseDen to have it count as turned in at that time, then turn in the hardcopy when you are on campus next. For each day that you turn in any paper late, I will deduct 10 points.
- Exams – Make-ups permitted for documented emergencies only, permitted at the discretion of the instructor.
- If class meets on a holy day of your faith, please inform me by August 28 so that we can arrange for missed assignments.

Classroom Environment

- Graphic Content: In this class, we will openly discuss controversial topics related to sex and sexuality. Some of the readings, films, and discussions in this course deal with sensitive and graphic material including, but not limited to, profanity, nude and sexual imagery, and explicit narratives of sexual behaviors, practices, and violence. Some of the issues we will address in class and through assignments may challenge or transcend your comfort zone, values, beliefs, and/or personal tastes. Such material may offend some students or cause discomfort. While we will consider all material sociologically and maturely, some students may have difficulty with course content. If you think your discomfort might impede your engagement with class, please come see me – this class may not be appropriate for you.
- Respectful Discussion Please keep in mind that the student body is diverse and refrain from making assumptions about who is or is not around you. I trust that you will remain respectful in class. We all have opinions, and it is okay to respectfully disagree with other people’s comments. It is also okay to engage in passionate discussion using claims based on evidence. It is not okay to engage in actions that are hostile or derogatory. Please monitor the amount of talking you do during class. I encourage participation from all students. For the frequent talkers, try waiting for 3 students to talk before you contribute to discussion again. For quieter folks, take advantage of silences to offer your thoughts. Please raise your hand to contribute to class, as calling out can be silencing to others who are less comfortable doing so. Audio and video recordings of class are not allowed without written permission from the instructor. Electronic devices are allowed for class purposes only. Using devices for other reasons may result in lowered participation grades.
- Note that UWG professors are mandatory reporters and are obliged to report incidents of sexual harassment and assault to the university’s Title IX office. Please keep this in my when sharing personal experiences.

Please note that by maintaining your enrollment in this class, you are bound by the terms set forth in the course syllabus.
