Course description
A composition course focusing on skills required for both effective writing for various rhetorical situations and critical reading of texts, primarily non-fiction. In writing, students must demonstrate competency in exposition, argumentation, and writing that is strengthened by the use of multiple textual sources.

By the end of this course, students should have learned:
-- To extend the skills of expository writing and critical thinking established in English 1101.
-- To read, understand, and interpret fiction, drama, and poetry and write analytically about them.
-- To understand literary principles and use basic terms important to critical writing and reading.
-- To construct essays using textual evidence from both primary and secondary sources.

Required Material

Major Course Assignments
Essay One -- extending skills of expository writing and critical thinking
Essay Two -- interpreting fiction and writing analytically, using evidence from both primary and secondary sources

Essay Three -- constructing an essay using evidence from both primary and secondary sources

Plagiarism & Academic Dishonesty
The Department of English and Philosophy defines plagiarism as taking personal credit for the words and ideas of others as they are presented in electronic, print, and verbal sources. The Department expects that students will accurately credit sources in all assignments. An equally dishonest practice is fabricating sources or facts; it is another form of misrepresenting the truth. Plagiarism is grounds for failing the course.

The University policies for handling Academic Dishonesty are found in the following documents:

The Faculty Handbook, sections 207 and 208.0401
http://www.westga.edu/~vpaa/handrev/

Student Uncatalogue: "Rights and Responsibilities"; Appendix J. http://www.westga.edu/handbook/

Excessive Collaboration
By the end of the term, students should demonstrate the ability to produce independent writing (writing without collaborative assistance of peers, writing tutors, or professionals in the field) that shows a level of competency in both ENGL 1101 and 1102. Although classroom activities and out-of-class assignments may highlight collaborative learning and collaborative research, excessive collaboration (collaboration that results in the loss of a student's voice/style and original claims to course-related work) is considered another form of academic dishonesty and therefore will not be permitted.

Role of the Writing Center
The role of the Writing Center is to offer consultation in which tutors question, respond to, offer choices, and encourage revision in student essays. Tutors do not evaluate or prescribe solutions to problematic areas in student essays, and tutors are specifically trained to avoid appropriating the student's work.

In classes that meet twice a week, a student is allowed three absences. Upon the fourth absence, the student may lose a letter grade. For each subsequent absence, an additional letter grade may be subtracted from the final grade. Be aware that no distinction exists between excused and unexcused absences.

Disruptive Behavior Policy

Such behavior includes — but is not limited to — arriving late for class, allowing cell phones to ring, speaking disrespectfully to the instructor and/or to other students, checking email or surfing the web, and using personal audio or video devices. Each dismissal of this kind will count as an absence and will be applied toward the attendance policy above. For each course, the course syllabus will document the amount of in-class (or other direct faculty instruction) and out-of-class work required to earn the credit hour(s) assigned to the course. Out-of-class work will include all forms of credit-bearing activity, including but not limited to assignments, readings, observations, and musical practice. Where available, the university grants academic credit for students who verify via competency-based testing, that they have accomplished the learning outcomes associated with a course that would normally meet the requirements outlined above (e.g. AP credit, CLEP, and departmental exams).
