Bradford's Manuscript

As the precise layout and careful handwriting of this detail from the first page of Bradford's manuscript suggest, he evidently began to write his history with an eye to publication. But he continued to add to it for nearly twenty years, and the complete manuscript was not published until the mid-nineteenth century.

Boston and extensively reported in newspapers throughout the United States. The text of the following selections is taken from Of Plimoth Plantation, an exact transcription of the manuscript published in Boston by order of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in 1900. We have retained Bradford's original capitalization, punctuation, paragraphing, and spelling, except in a few instances where a now-archaic spelling obscures the meaning of a passage. But we have regularized his inconsistent chapter headings and expanded his abbreviations, including ye (the) and ye (that), which Bradford used throughout his manuscript.

From Of Plimoth Plantation

[From Book 1]

And first of the occasion and indusments ther unto; the which that I may truly unfould, I must beginge at the very roote & rise of the same. The which I shall endeavor to manfest in a plaine stile, with singular regard unto the simple truth in all things, at least as near as my slender judgmente can attaine the same.

From Chapter 1

It is well knowne unto the godly and judicious, how ever since the first breaking out of the lighte of the gospell in our Honourable Nation of England, (which was the first of nations whom the Lord adorned ther with, after that grosse darkness of popery which had covered & overspread the Christian worlde,) what warres & oppositions ever since, Satan hath raised, maintained, and continued against the Sainctes, from time to time, in one sorte or other. Some times by bloody death and cruell torments; other whiles imprisionsments, banishments, & other hard usages; as being loath his kingdom should go downe, the truth prevale, and the churches of God reverte to their anciente puritie, and recover their primitive order, libertie, & bewtie. [. . .]

But that I may come more near my intendemente: when as by the travell & diligence of some godly & zealous preachers, & Gods blessing on their labours, as in other places of the land, so in the North parts,1 many became inlightened by the word of God, and had their ignorance & sins discovered unto them, and begane by his grace to reforme their lives, and make conscience of their waies, the worke of God was no sooner manifest in them, but presently they were both scoffed and scorned by the prophane multitude, and the ministers urged with the yoak of subscription,2 or els must be silenced; and the poore people were so vexed with apparitors, & pursuants, & the comisserie courts,3 as truly their affliction was not smale; which, notwithstanding, they bore sundrie years with much patience, till they were occasioned (by the continuance & encrease of these troubls, and other means which the Lord raised up in those days) to see further into things by the light of the word of God. How not only these base and beggerly ceremonies were unlawfull, but also that the lordly & tiranous power of the prelats ought not to be submitted unto; which thus, contrary to the freedom of the gospell, would load & burden mens consciences, and by their compulsive power make a prophane mixture of persons & things in the worship of God. [. . .]

So many therfore of these professors as saw the evil of these things, in thes parts, and whose harts the Lord had touched with heavenly zeale for his trueth, they shooke of this yoake of antichristian bondage, and as the Lords free people, joyned them selves (by a covenant of the Lord4) into a church estate, in the fellowship of the gospell, to walk in all his waies, made known, or to be made known unto them, according to their best endeavours, whatsoever it should cost them, the Lord assisting them. And that it cost them something this ensuing historie will declare. [. . .]

But after these things they could not long continue in any peaceable condition, but were hunted & persecuted on every side, so as their former afflictions were but as fle-bitings in comparison of these which now came upon them. For some were taken & clapt up in prison, others had their houses besett & watcht night and day, & hardly escaped their hands; and the most were faine to flie & leave their howses & habitations, and the means of their livelehood. Yet these & many other sharper things which afterward befell them, were no other then they looked for, and thenceforth were the better prepared to bear them by the assistance of Gods grace & spirite. Yet seeing them selves thus molested, and that ther was no hope of their continuance ther, by a joynte consente they resolved to goe into the Low-Countries, wheer they heard was freedome of Religion for all men: as also how sundrie from London, & other parts of the land, had beene exiled and persecuted for the same cause, & were gone thither, and lived at Amsterdam, & in other places of the land. So after they had continued together about a year, and kept their meetings every Saboth in one place or other, exercising the worship of God amongst them selves, notwithstanding all the diligence & malice of their adversaaries, they seeing they could no longer continue in that condition, they resolved to get over into Hollâd as they could; which was in the year 1607. & 1608. Chapter 4

Showing the reasons & causes of their removall.

After they had lived in this citie5 about some 11. or 12. years, (which is the more observ-able being the whole time of that famose truce between that state & the Spaniards;) and sundrie of them were taken away by death, & many others begane to be well striken in years, the grave mistris Experience having taught them many things, those prudent governours with sundrie of the sagt members begane both deeply to apprehend their present dangers, & wisely to foresee the future, & thinke of timely remedy. In the agitation of their thoughts, and much discourse of things heard aboute, at length they began to incline to this conclusion, of removall to some other place. Not out of any newfanglednes, or other such like giddie humor, by which men are oftentimes transported to their great hurt & danger, but for sundrie weightie & solid reasons; some of the cheefe of which I will hear brefly touch. And first, they saw & found by experience the hardnes of the place & countrie to be such, as few in comparison would come to them, and fewer that would bide it out, and continew with them. For many that came to them, and many more that desired to be with them, could not endure that great labor and hard fare, with other inconveniences which they underwent & were contented with. But though they loved their persons, approved their cause, and honoured their sufferings, yet they left them as it were weeping, as Orpah did her mother in law Naomi, or as those Romans did Cato in Utica, who desired to be excused & borne with, though they could not all be Catones.6 For many, though they desired to enjoye the ordinances of God in their puritie, and the libertie of the gospell with them, yet, alas, they admitted of bondage, with danger of conscience, rather then to indure these hardships; yea, some preferred & chose the prisons in England, rather then this libertie in Holland, with these afflictions. But it was thought that if a better and easier place of living could be had, it would draw many,

5. citie: After leaving England, the Separatists settled in the city of Leyden in the Netherlands. They lived there until 1620, near the end of a twelve-year truce (begun in March 1609) in the Netherlands's long war of independence from Spain.
6. Orpah . . . Catones: In the Old Testament, Orpah and Ruth were the daughters-in-law of Naomi; after their husbands died, Naomi wanted the two women to return to their own people. Orpah went and left, but Ruth remained with Naomi (Ruth 1:1-20). Cato the Younger (95 BCE-46 BCE), a Roman statesman, was intensely devoted to the Republic and opposed to Julius Caesar, who was gaining unprecedented power in Rome. Cato committed suicide after forces led by Scipio, another defender of the Republic, were defeated by Caesar.
& take away these discouragements. Yea, their pastor would often say, that many of those who both wrote & preached now against them, if they were in a place wher they might have libertie and live comfortably, they would then practise as they did.

Secondly. They saw that though the people generally bore all these difficulties very cherfully, & with a resolute courage, being in the best & strength of their years, yet old age began to steal on many of them, (and their great & continuall labours, with other crosses and sorrows, hastened it before the time,) so as it was not only probably thought, but apparently seen, that within a few years more they would be in danger to scatter, by necessities pressing them, or sinke under their burdens, or both. And therefore according to the devine proverb, that a wise man seeth the plague when it cometh, & hideth him selfe, Pro. 22. 3., so they like skillfull & beaten soldiars were fearfull either to be intrapped or surrounded by their enimies, so as they should neither be able to fight nor flie; and therfor thought it better to dislodge betimes to some place of better advantage & less danger, if any such could be found. Thirdly; as necessitie was a taskmaster over them, so they were forced to be such, not only to their servants, but in a sorte, to their dearest children; the which as it did not a little wound the tender harts of many a loving father & mother, so it produced likewise sundrie sad & sorrowfull effects. For many of their children, that were of best dispositions and gracious inclinations, haveing lerned to bear the yoake in their youth,7 and willing to bear parte of their parents burden, were, often times, so oppressed with their hevick labours, that though their minds were free and willing, yet their bodies bowed under the weight of the same, and became decreped in their early youth; the vigor of nature being consumed in the very bud as it were. But that which was more lamentable, and of all sorowes most heavye to be borne, was that many of their children, by these occasions, and the great licentiousnes of youth in that countrie,8 and the manifold temptations of the place, were drewne away by evill examples into extravagante & dangerous courses, getting the raines off their neks, & departing from their parents. Some became soldiars, others tooke upon them farr viages by sea, and other some worse courses, tending to dissolutnes & the danger of their soules, to the great greefe of their parents and dishonour of God. So that they saw their posteritie would be in danger to degenerate & be corrupted.

Lastly, (and which was not least,) a great hope & inward zeal they had of laying some good foundation, or at least to make some way therunto, for the propagating & advancing the gospell of the kingdom of Christ in those remote parts of the world; yea, though they should be but even as stepping stones unto others for the performing of so great a work.

These, & some other like reasons, moved them to undertake this resolution of their removal; the which they afterward prosecuted with so great difficulties, as by the sequell will appeare.

7: to bear ... youth: See Lamentations 3:27: "It is good for a man that he bear the yoke of his youth."
8: great licentiousness of youth in that countrie: To the horror of the Separatists, who devoted the Sabbath entirely to religion and worship, after attending church Dutch children spent the rest of the day feasting and playing games.
The place they had thoughts on was some of those vast & unpeopled countries of America, which are fruitful & fit for habitation, being devyoyd of all civill inhabitaunts, wher ther are only salvage & brutish men, which range up and downe, little otherwise then the wild beasts of the same. This proposition being made publike and coming to the scanning of all, it raised many variable opinions amongst men, and caused many fears & doubts amongst them selves. Some, from their reasons & hopes conceived, laboured to stirr up & incourage the rest to undertake & prosecute the same; others, againe, out of their fears, objected against it, & sought to divert from it, aleging many things, and those neither unreasonable nor improbable; as that it was a great designe, and subiecte to many unconceivable perilles & dangers; as, besides the casualties of the seas (which none can be freed from) the length of the vioage was such, as the weake bodies of women and other persons wore out with age & traville (as many of them were) could never be able to endure. And yet if they should, the miseries of the land which they should be exposed unto, would be to hard to be borne: and lickly, some or all of them togetheir, to consume & utterly to ruinate them. For ther they should be liable, to famine, and nakednes, & the wante, in a maner, of all things. The chang of aire, diate, & drinking of water, would infecte their bodies with sore sicknesses, and greweous diseases. And also those which should escape or overcome these difficulties, should yeott be in continuall danger of the salvagge people, who are cruell, barbarous, & most trecherous, being most furious in their rage, andmerciles wher they overcome; not being contente only to kill, & take away life, but delight to tormente men in the most bloodie maner that may be; fleasing some alive with the shells of fishes, cutting of the members & joynts of others by peesmeale, and broiling on the coles, eate the collops\(^9\) of their flesh in their sight whilst they live; with other cruelties horrible to be related. And surely it could not be thought but the very hearing of these things could not but move the very bowels of men to grate within them, and make the weake to quake & tremble. It was furder objected, that it would require greater sufties of money to furnish such a voyaige, and to fitt them with necessaries, then their consumed estats would amounte too; and yeet they must as well looke to be seconded with supplies, as presently to be trasported. Also many presidents of ill success, & lamentable miseries befalne others in the like designes, were easie to be found, and not forgotten to be aleged; besides their owne experiencie, in their former troubles & hardships in their removall into Holand, and how hard a thing it was for them to live in that strange place, though it was a neighbour countrie, & a civill and rich comone wealth.

It was answered, that all great & honourable actions are accompanied with great difficulties, and must be both enterprised and overcome with answerable courages. It was granted the dangers were great, but not desperate; the difficulties were many, but not invincible. For though their were many of them likly, yet they were not certaine; it might be sundrie of the things feared might never befale; others by providente care & the use of good means, might in a great measure be prevented; and all of them, through the help of God, by fortitude and patience, might either be borne, or overcome. True it was, that such attempts were not to be made and undertaken without good ground & reason; not rashly or lightly as many have done for curiousitie or hope of gaines, &c. But their condition was not ordinarie; their ends were good & honourable; their calling lawfull, & urgente; and therfore they might expecte the blessing of God in their proceeding. Yea, though they should loose their lives in this action, yet might they have conforte in the same, and their endeavors would be honourable. They lived hear but as men in exile, & in a poore condition; and as great miseries might possibly befale them in this place, for the 12. years of truce were now out, & ther was nothing but beating of drumes, and preparing for warr, the events whereof are allway uncertaine. The Spaniard might prove as cruell as the salvages of America, and the famine and pestelence as sore hear as ther, & their libertie less to looke out for remedie. After many other particulier things answered & aledged on both sids, it was fully concluded by the major parte, to put this designe in execution, and to prosecute it by the best means they could.

Chapter 9
Of their voyage, & how they passed the sea, and of their safe arrival at Cape Cod.

September 6. These troubles being blowne over, and now all being compacte togather in one shipe, they put to sea againe with a prosperus winde, which continued diverse days together, which was some encouragmente unto them; yet according to the usual manner many were afflicted with sea-sickness. And I may not omitte a speciall worke of Gods providence. Ther was a proud, & very profane yonge man, one of the see-men, of a lustie, able body, which made him the more hauy; he would alwaye be commending the poore people in their sicknes, & cursing them dayly with greevous execrations, and did not let10 to tell them, that he hoped to help to cast half of them over board before they came to their journeys end, and to make men with what they had; and if he were by any gently reproved, he would curse and swear most bitterly. But it pleased God before they came halfe seas over, to smite this yong man with a greevous disease, of which he dyed in a desperate manner, and so was him selfe the first that was throwne overboard. Thus his curses light on his owne head; and it was an astonishmente to all his fellows, for they noted it to be the just hand of God upon him.

After they had enjoyed faire winds and weather for a season, they were encountred many times with crosse winds, and mette with many fierce stormes, with which the shipe was shroudly11 shaken, and her upper works made very leakie; and one of the maine beames in the midd ships was bowed & craked, which put them in some fear that

10. together in one shipe: The original plan called for two ships to sail from England, the Speedwell and the Mayflower. The Speedwell, a smaller boat that brought Bradford and the other members of the Separatist community from Holland to England, proved to be unseaworthy. During the delay, some members of the Holland group decided not to go to the New World; 102 people eventually sailed on the Mayflower.
11. lustie: Healthy and strong.
12. let: Hesitate.
13. shroudly: Early form of shrewdly, meaning wickedly.
